Made entirely of Jatobá wood, the Mood Collection allows for various compositions using its different furniture pieces. It also features an additional organic element, a kind of "foreign body" – as the creator himself calls it – which aims to provide not only aesthetic contrast but also refinement to the pieces and their compositions.

The upholstered cushions in the Mood Collection are made of high-performance fabrics, designed and tested to withstand outdoor environments without losing their quality and beauty.

QUAKER DECOR

All Quaker Decor fabrics are subjected to the most rigorous international quality testing before being released in the Brazilian market.

They are tested for durability under real usage conditions, including UVresistance, abrasion, elongation, strength and color transfer.

Qualities such as surface texture, design/pattern, ability to absorb or reflect light, ability to match the product and blend within an environment when placed next to wood, laminate, glass, carpets, painted surfaces or other fabrics are also taken into consideration.

The tests best known to the industry are:

- Flame retardant [the fabric's ability not to spread flames];
- Crocking [ability to retain fabric color under different conditions];
- UV resistance [resistance of fabrics to fading when exposed to light];
- Physical properties [Resistance of fabrics to pilling, seam slippage and tearing];
- Abrasion [Ability of fabrics to withstand surface friction wear].

In addition to these, other tests are carried out on the fabrics according to the need and use of each product.
